Hi Nathan,
I would like to launch this project online the day new mayors are sworn in next month in Vancouver and Surrey.
So we have time. I need to discuss with Dan, Sobia and Doug.
Interested in your thoughts on how this could be designed in a reader-friendly and immersive way for online. With the ability to pull out a print “scorecard” as required.
The basic premise is to track how the new mayors are doing on their election promises. I pulled out 13 specific promises from McCallum’s platform to give you an idea of the initial content. Sobia will want to add a few more that are not in the platform and further refine the language.
The focus will be entirely on tangible, measurable promises.
There should be a way to attach stories related to each promise in the months/years ahead as we check in on their progress or failure to progress towards these goals.
And a color-coded system so that readers can see at a glance whether a promise has been achieved, is in progress, not significantly underway or abandoned.
Make sense?
Here’s the Surrey list:

Promise Tracker: Surrey Mayor Doug McCallum

SkyTrain to Newton
Extend rapid transit south to connect Newton to the broader Metro Vancouver network.

Tax freeze
Zero percent property tax increases for four years

More police
A major expansion of policing resources. Define?

Police helicopter and drones
A dedicated helicopter and a fleet of police drones for the Surrey Police Service within 90 days.

New pools and community centre
New swimming pools for Clayton Heights and City Centre, and a new Newton community centre with a pool

Heritage protection for Crescent Beach, Ocean Park
Crescent Beach and Ocean Park heritage designation protecting both neighbourhoods from the density pressures of the province's Bill 44.
The designation will protect the natural scenery, community character, and irreplaceable coastal environment that generations of Surrey families have called home.

No fees in city centre
City fees eliminated and red tape cut to fast-track transformational projects in the heart of Surrey.

Fast-track agri-businesses

Rezoning applications for greenhouses and agri-manufacturing will be fast-tracked

Direct farm sales
McCallum will pass a policy giving Surrey farmers the right to sell directly to Surrey residents, eliminating the middlemen who drive up the cost of food at every step between the farm and the family.

City hall audit
An independent forensic audit of city hall's land deals and to root out waste, abuse and fraud across city hall.

Leave Metro Vancouver
Withdrawing Surrey from the Metro Vancouver Regional District
Keeping only core utility services: water, sewer and waste.

Fast-track permits
Residential building permits approved in 60 days, guaranteed
If city hall misses the deadline, the permit fees are waived. Zero.

No business licence fees
Business licence fees waived for the first 2 years of every new business
